INTERMEDIATE ARCHITECTURAL DESIGN I: SYLLABUS

ARCH 281  Fall  2005

Department of Architecture
School of Architecture and Allied Arts
University of Oregon

CATALOGUE

Studio projects for second-year undergraduates. Integration of issues of context, activity support, spatial order, construction, structure, and environmental control. Emphasis on schematic concept formation and subsequent architectural development. Prerequisite: ARCH 182. (Six credits)

DESCRIPTION

In architecture 281 students conduct an intensive study of an urban street as a means to develop research, design and collaborative skills. The course begins with considering boundaries, thresholds and transitions. Next, students bring these concepts to analyze and document a downtown area. The students then use this site analysis to design an infill building in this area, with emphasis on the public interface.

Members of the community are invited to play the role of “client” in a simulation of the programming phase of the architectural design process. Students make field visits and conduct interviews to determine spatial and equipment requirements. They assimilate this information with their analysis of site conditions and relevant guidelines and regulations to develop a working program that informs decisions about building organization, space, structure and construction. Lectures, screenings and selected readings will address theory central to these design challenges.

MEETS  MWF 1:00 - 4:50 on the second floor of Pacific Hall, Monday lectures 1-2 in Fenton 110. See syllabus for additional special meeting locations. Note: Some rescheduling with advance notice will take place to accommodate final reviews, visitor schedules and instructor schedules.

LEARNING  Students will advance their architectural design skills by developing abilities:
- to understand how interrelated forces and policies affect the form of an urban district
- to analyze site and program information to inform design decisions
- to respond to the built environment in the selection of a site, the development of a program and the design of a project
- to apply ordering, egress and construction principles to architectural spaces.
- to develop collaborative skills
- to improve verbal, graphic and critical thinking skills

INSTRUCTIONAL METHODOLOGY  This course is organized as an interactive studio in which students engage in independent project-based learning. Faculty support student explorations by informing students of resources, suggesting approaches and methods, as well as raising questions for group discussion. Peer teaching between students an essential part of the studio, as important as teaching by instructors. Class meetings include a variety of communication and project development formats including desk critiques, pin-ups, reviews, in-class discussions, teamwork sessions, lectures, and occasional field trips.

ARCH 281 students are expected to:

- participate actively in studio discussions.
- identify issues relevant to the project assignment.
- gather pertinent information in the field, online, and in the library.
- evaluate project needs, opportunities, and constraints.
- develop appropriate design concepts, which reflect community and client aspirations and are compatible with the context.
- document and present design work using the assigned formats and media.
- conduct themselves professionally. This includes respecting the rights and property of others, and performing community service obligations in the studio.
- work cooperatively with other students and complete their share of team projects satisfactorily.
- complete assignments and contribute to the course website on time. All original drawings and models completed as course requirements are the property of the Department and may be retained permanently by the Department. Students whose work is selected for inclusion in the department archives will have the opportunity to photograph or otherwise reproduce the work for their portfolios.

Performance in ARCH 281 will be graded on a pass/no pass basis only. Student work will be assessed with the Department of Architecture’s studio evaluation form. Students are required to attend the end of term exit interview with their studio instructor. A deferred grade will be given only in accordance with University regulations. It will not be given for incomplete projects.

ARCH 281 students are expected to attend all studio meetings, be on time and stay for the entire session. No unexcused absences are permitted. Excused absences such as illness or personal emergency must be reported to the studio instructor prior to missed class. Students who have missed three classes could result in a No Pass grade and are required to meet with their instructor before returning to studio.

If you have special needs and anticipate needing accommodations in this course, please make arrangements to meet with your instructor soon. Please document any disabilities with a letter from the counselor for students with disabilities.

The University community is dedicated to the advancement of knowledge and the development of integrity. In order to thrive and excel, this community must preserve the freedom of thought and expression of all its members. A culture of respect that honors the rights, safety, dignity, and worth of every individual is essential to preserve such freedom. Students are expected to conduct themselves in a manner that respects the rights and well-being of others.

Students should be familiar with University policies related to academic integrity and consequences for dishonest conduct. All work submitted should be your own and all sources should be cited.

For each project, students will create a summary portfolio presentation with reflections about design thinking, media, and process. Students are encouraged to get incremental feedback to incrementally develop a refined version of the portfolio, to be collected at the end of the term.
